What This Volume Is About

Volume 4 takes communication into real life. It focuses on survival language, safety, routines, emotional readiness and the ability to participate at home, in school and in the community.

Parents learn how to teach functional communication during dressing, meals, hygiene, classroom routines and public situations - while gradually fading prompts so that support does not become permanent dependence.

Every volume includes the same orientation tools, so parents can understand the full sequence and begin at the level that matches the child today - not the level they hope to reach later.

VOLUME 4

Who Should Read This Volume?

- Your child has good vocabulary and uses basic sentences.
- Categories, concepts and early grammar are understood.
- Daily routines still require heavy adult prompting.
- Time concepts such as before/after and yesterday/today are difficult.
- Community or classroom participation is weaker than communication at home.
- Your child needs safer, more independent ways to ask for help and express frustration.

4 What Problem This Volume Solves

- Closes the gap between knowing language and using it independently.
- Reduces prompt dependence in daily living and classroom routines.
- Teaches safety language before community demands increase.
- Helps the child participate rather than merely comply.

VOLUME 4

What You Learn From This Volume

- Use functional communication for daily participation.
- Express frustration and ask for help appropriately.
- Teach safety words and identification of trusted caregivers.
- Process spoken instructions without relying on visuals every time.
- Build language for routine participation.
- Adapt to classroom routines and group expectations.
- Strengthen repetition, early memory and sequencing.
- Fade adult prompts systematically.
- Label and communicate basic emotions.
- Generalise communication across home, school and community settings.

Designed for practice inside ordinary family routines - not only at a therapy table.
